The dictionary tells us noir is "crime fiction featuring hard-boiled cynical characters and bleak sleazy settings." Here in Bangkok we have our fair share of sleazy settings and cynical characters, and some hard-boiled cynical fiction. The French will have us believe noir means "black" or 'dark film.'

Noir Guide to Bangkok: A Darker Look at Thailand's Capital ...

At first glance, the title Bangkok Noir reads like an oxymoron. Given the sunny climate and the sunny-side-up dispositions of most Thais, invoking the word "noir" next to Bangkok seems a mite strange, because the French word for "black" is more a state of existential despair than a genre of film and fiction.

Bangkok Noir was published in 2009 and hit the German bestseller lists, where it stayed for a considerable time. Tooten's half-lit, stark images and Willemsen's lyrical, free-flowing narrative formed a near perfect mirror of the city. And Tooten, his project wrapped up, stayed. " I feel at home here.
